MEMORANDUM OPINION
DISMISSING CIVIL RIGHTS COMPLAINT

This is a civil rights action brought by David Washington, a Texas inmate appearing pro se, against employees or agents of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice (“TDCJ”) pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Plaintiff is an inmate confined in the Connally Unit of TDCJ. Plaintiff has filed an application to proceed in forma pauperis (ECF No. 4) and has sought appointment of counsel. (ECF No. 5). Plaintiff has not shown that at the time of the filing of this lawsuit, he was “under imminent danger of serious physical injury.” Therefore, this action is DISMISSED as barred by the three-strike provision of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g).

In support of his Complaint, Plaintiff presents the following allegations:

Plaintiff alleges that the Defendants have violated his right to privacy and also deliberately broke some of his property, without specifying any action of any particular defendant. (ECF No. 3 at 4–10).

Based on the foregoing, Plaintiff purports to sue the Defendants for $75 billion dollars in damages and demands to receive “a check every week” for privacy violations. (Id.).

The PLRA, enacted into law on April 26, 1996, amended 28 U.S.C. § 1915 as it relates to civil actions filed by prisoners in federal court. Among the changes effected by the PLRA was the inclusion of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g), also known as the “three-strike” provision. Section 1915(g) precludes a prisoner from bringing a civil action in forma pauperis if on three or more prior occasions, he filed civil actions or appeals in federal court which were dismissed, either by a district court or appellate court, as being frivolous, malicious, or for failing to state a claim. See Jackson v. Johnson, 475 F.3d 261, 265 (5th Cir. 2007). When a district court dismisses a case as frivolous or for failure to state a claim, such a dismissal counts as a “strike” under 1915(g) once the judgment becomes final. See Adepegba v. Hammons, 103 F.3d 383, 387-88 (5th Cir. 1996). A district court’s dismissal is final when the prisoner has exhausted avenues of appeal or has waived any appellate rights. Id.

A prisoner is barred from proceeding in forma pauperis if he is subject to the “three-strike” provision “unless the prisoner is under imminent danger of serious physical injury.” 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g); see also Banos v. O’Guin, 144 F.3d 883, 884 (5th Cir. 1998). The complaint must present a claim that Plaintiff is in danger of imminent serious physical injury to overcome the bar. See Carson v. Johnson, 112 F.3d 818, 822-823 (5th Cir. 1997). In applying the “three-strike” provision of 1915(g), a court may consider case dispositions that occurred prior to the effective date of the PLRA. See Adepegba, 103 F.3d at 387-88. A review of the Public Access to Court Electronic Records (“PACER”) and the Sanction Database reflects that Plaintiff has had at least three prior actions dismissed with prejudice as frivolous or for failure to state a claim, as outlined herein; thus, Plaintiff is barred from proceeding in forma pauperis as he requests.

While incarcerated, Plaintiff has filed at least three prior civil actions that were dismissed as frivolous or for failure to state a claim. See, e.g., Washington v. Tupa, et al., No. 5:22-cv-00889 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 30, 2022) (noting Washington’s history, which includes at least seven strikes, and dismissing the civil action under 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g)). Therefore, Washington may not file another civil action IFP while incarcerated unless he is in “imminent danger of serious physical injury.” 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g).

And here, Plaintiff has not alleged or shown that he was in imminent danger of serious bodily injury when he filed his suit. Instead, he makes conclusory allegations that several named officers failed to take proper actions on an undisclosed date and time. It is well established that an allegation of past harm is insufficient to satisfy the imminent-danger exception. King v. Livingston, 212 F. App’x 260 (5th Cir. 2006); see also McClure v. Unknown Duty Warden, No. 6:21-cv-193, 2021 WL3782917,*2 (S.D. Tex. June 8, 2021) (collecting cases). As a result, the Court finds that Plaintiff has not shown that he was in imminent danger of serious bodily injury when he filed this complaint, and he must pay the full filing fee if he wishes to proceed.

For the above reasons, the complaint filed by Plaintiff is DISMISSED as barred by the three strikes provision of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g). This dismissal is without prejudice to Plaintiff’s right to reopen the case if he pays the $402.00 filing and administrative fees and files a motion to reopen within thirty days of the date of final judgment.

SO ORDERED.
